

Database security warnings

Many database and journal publishers are in the process of upgrading their security protocols. This is causing problems for the system we use for ensuring off-campus access to our resources. While we work to find alternatives to this system, you may encounter the following warning.

EXAMPLE from Chrome

You may bypass this warning without harm to your computer. Select Advanced and follow instructions to proceed to article or database.

Firefox has a similar security warning. Instead of asking you to proceed as noted above, it will ask you to add exception and then to confirm exception.

If you have questions, please contact Steve Duffy, 515-961-1748 or visit the Research Assistance office in Dunn Library.