Editing Settings in Scholar

By default, scholar courses use a weekly outline in which each section of the course is headed by the dates for one week. The first day of the week is automatically set to the first day of the term. This means that for fall semester courses, the weeks run Tuesday through Monday. You can change the start date so that the weeks run Monday through Sunday, or Sunday through Saturday.

If you don't plan to post materials each week, you might prefer a topic outline instead. The course site for new faculty orientation uses a topic outline in which each section is numbered. And each heading can be edited to add a meaningful label.
To change any of these settings, go to the settings menu and select edit settings.

Scroll down to just beneath the course summary and you'll see the drop-down menu to change from a weekly to topic outline. Beneath that is a drop-down menu that lets you change the number of weeks or topics – that is the number of sections in the course.

And beneath that are drop-down menus to let you change the course start date. If you are using a Topics format, this isn’t necessary. But if you are using a Weekly format, this is where you can set the week to start on a Sunday, a Monday, a Tuesday, or whatever you want.

Once you've made any changes you desire scroll to the bottom of the screen and click Save Changes.
