What if you could find a college that cares as much about your future success as you do?
WELCOME TO SIMPSON

THIS IS WHERE YOUR SUCCESS STORY BEGINS
Because of Simpson, I’ve discovered my dream of working in the criminal justice field.

SOLID REPUTATION

This is where you will find PROFESSORS who will take the time to know you and work alongside you to help achieve your goals.

This is where you will find CLASSES designed to provide what employers and graduate schools are most interested in.

This is where you will find the GUIDANCE to match your specific talents and abilities to an academic major.

NATE CONNEALY

If you are unsure about a major, Nate Connealy has a message for you: Simpson can help.

“I didn’t know what I wanted to study when I came to Simpson,” he said. “The students and faculty described how common that was. They reassured me that they would work with me to find my niche.”

Nate knew that Simpson’s Engaged Citizenship Curriculum would provide the opportunity to explore different academic fields. He decided to major in criminal justice and Spanish.

“Simpson definitely guided me because there were professors always willing to help. There was no pressure for me to decide on a major until I was ready.”
YOU’LL FEEL AT HOME

Indianola is a charming community with a downtown square a few blocks from campus. You will find a movie theater, restaurants and shops all within walking distance.

Indianola is also the home to:
- A new YMCA (August 2013)
- The National Balloon Classic
- Great bike and hiking trails
- Lake Ahquabi State Park
- Des Moines Metro Opera
When Steffi Lee told friends back home in Anaheim, California, that she had chosen Simpson College, they thought she would be attending classes in a cornfield—but that is far from the truth.

“In reality, I’ve done more and have had more life experiences in my first year than they have,” she said. “I have no regrets about coming this far and choosing Simpson. I love it here.”

As a freshman majoring in multimedia journalism and political science, Steffi was among several Simpson students invited to New York City to discuss their political views with Scott Pelley of the CBS Evening News. She also had a story published on the USA Today website.

“Simpson pushes students to go for whatever they feel like doing,” she said. “They really do focus on what students need during their four years here. The professors know us by name and know what we’re involved in. It’s neat to be part of that environment.”

The ratio of students to professors on the Simpson Campus

How does that contribute to your success?
A PERSONALIZED EDUCATION

At Simpson, you will be taught by a professor, not a graduate assistant. Most of our professors hold the highest degrees in their field. They are accomplished experts.

Our smaller class sizes mean that you will get the personal attention you deserve.

You won’t be an anonymous face in a large lecture hall. Simpson professors invest the time to get to know you as a person—your hopes, your dreams.

Someday, your professors may be writing recommendations on your behalf to employers and graduate schools.

Wouldn’t you want them to know you?

At Simpson, they will.

“I WAS ABLE TO GO TO EACH PROFESSOR AND ESTABLISH A CONNECTION WITH THEM THAT I WOULDN’T HAVE AT ANY OTHER SCHOOL.”

- Anna Statz

A SIMPSON SUCCESS STORY

STEPHEN HENRICH

Stephen Henrich’s Simpson experience was so successful, he was accepted into the following medical schools: Harvard, Yale, Stanford, Duke, Northwestern, the Mayo Clinic and the University of Iowa.

He credits his Simpson professors.

“We have fantastic faculty members who are willing to get involved, and help you with anything you want to do,” he says.

Stephen majored in math, biochemistry and philosophy. “Not only are the faculty really willing to work with each other, but the structure is also set up to be tightly knit,” he says. “Each department likes to see students branch out.”

One of his Simpson professors helped him obtain an internship to study glaucoma at the Jackson Laboratory in Maine. Another worked with him as he studied the AIDS crisis in Namibia in southern Africa.

“You don’t spend your first two years at Simpson just being somebody’s assistant. I was constructing my own research projects from day one. The professors were more than happy to work with me.”

“BECAUSE I CHOSE SIMPSON, I WILL BE GOING TO MEDICAL SCHOOL AT NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY.”
UNIQUE WAYS TO LEARN
THE JOHN C. CULVER PUBLIC POLICY CENTER

Fosters civic engagement and community service.

“At a bigger university, they’ll tell you the program and hopefully you’ll fit in. With the Culver program, they asked me what I wanted to do and accomplish. I had their full support.”

- Ethan Fredrick

MATH MODELING

The Mathematical Contest in Modeling is an annual competition in which teams of students from around the world are given 96 hours to solve a complex problem. The competition tests students’ critical thinking, research and writing skills, as well as their ability to manage time and work as a team. Simpson students annually field more teams for this highly competitive event than any other college or university in the country and often earn one of the top rankings.

“I love working for the Iowa History Center which preserves and promotes the state’s history. I have had amazing opportunities, including setting up K-12 Field Trips to the State Historical Society and hosting forum events with influential Iowans.”

- Allie Walker

IOWA HISTORY CENTER

WHY DOES THIS MATTER TO YOU?
An internship is a great way to get a head start in the competitive job market. The connections you make may lead to your first job.

It’s an added value of a Simpson education and another way we demonstrate our commitment to your success.

SARINA RHINEHART

Internships allow Simpson students to build their resumés long before graduation.

Sarina Rhinehart has served as the finance intern for a political campaign, a marketing intern for the Des Moines Downtown Community Alliance and communications intern for the Iowa House Democratic Caucus at the State Capitol.

“My internships have helped me discover what types of work I am interested in,” she said.

She eventually hopes to be a professor in politics or history.

“My experiences as an intern have been some of the most worthwhile experiences at Simpson. They allow me to take the skills I learn in the classroom and apply them to real-world situations.”
DON’T JUST READ ABOUT A COUNTRY’S CULTURE—EXPERIENCE IT.

A firsthand understanding of other cultures will make you a well-rounded student and will put you in a better position to compete in the global marketplace.

The “Simpson Experience Abroad” program gives students the opportunity to spend a semester studying abroad with Simpson faculty. Destinations include Argentina, Australia, England, Germany, Tahiti and Thailand.

In addition, our popular May Term provides students a chance to participate in an intensive, three-week long, faculty-led international travel course.

Studying abroad is an unforgettable experience that will shape your future.
Before she left for college, Kelly Hein’s older brother offered some advice: “See the world.”

“He didn’t have a chance to study abroad, and he always regretted it.”

She spent a semester in Thailand as part of the Simpson Experience Abroad program. She also traveled to the Dominican Republic for a May Term class.

“It was a blast,” she said. “I’m fascinated by culture and sociology. Studying abroad really appealed to me for those reasons.”

Simpson, Kelly said, offers the feel of a small-town community where people think critically about global issues.

“Having the Study Abroad experience puts me at ease for the transition after college,” she said.

“Because I chose Simpson, I will be teaching underprivileged children in Indianapolis with Teach for America.”

Simpson’s academic calendar includes fall and spring semesters followed by a three-week term at the beginning of May called May Term. One option during May Term is to study abroad.

Other opportunities during May Term include internships, domestic travel or taking a course on campus.

BUILDING ON OUR TRADITIONS

We’re always looking to improve your Simpson Experience.

Recent projects include the new, $14 million Kent Campus Center, a popular destination for students.

While there, you can visit, study or select from several food and snack options, including Au Bon Pain café bakery, Red Mango smoothies, Tyler’s Grille and a coffee shop featuring Starbucks products.

We’ve also remodeled Pfeiffer Dining Hall and revamped the menu to include The Kitchen, My Pantry, Fresh Market, Baker’s Crust and HearthStone Ovens.

Theatre majors and theatergoers alike praise the recent renovation of the Blank Performing Arts Center, which added 17,000 square feet and space for specialized classrooms.

Next up: A renovation and expansion of the Cowles and Carse athletic and fitness facilities. It’s creating a great buzz on campus.

While we celebrate our new and improved facilities, we also cherish our traditions—events such as Yell Like Hell, Campus Day and the All College Sing.

Whether you’re walking to class with other students, cheering on the Storm or enjoying a music recital in a plush auditorium, your life on campus should be enriching and memorable.

It’s all part of what a great college looks and feels like.

YOU CAN FEEL THE SIMPSON SPIRIT EVERYWHERE ON CAMPUS.
Kate Nielsen enjoyed one of the greatest seasons in the storied history of the Simpson women’s basketball team. She earned first team All-American honors on the court and first team Academic All-American honors in the classroom.

“They’re equal awards in my book, because I had to work just as hard to get both of them,” she said. “It’s something I dreamed of happening.”

Kate transferred to Simpson from a larger school after her freshman year.

“I do not regret one single thing about coming here,” she said. “Everywhere you go, you're a family. There were professors at my games, who then would email and say they were supporting us. That’s a community that I want to be involved in.

“I definitely feel 100 percent prepared for the future.”

“Because I chose Simpson, I have been accepted into the Physical Therapy program at Des Moines University.”
Simpson excels in the arts—and you don’t have to be a music, art or theatre major to participate.

In fact, students are encouraged to step out of their comfort zones and try something new.

You can, of course, major in art, theatre or music, but part of what makes the Simpson experience so enriching is that you can still participate in those programs as a non-major.

You never know what might happen. Maybe you’ll find yourself on stage! Anything is possible at Simpson.
Because I chose Simpson, I worked as a summer intern at the largest children’s theatre company in the world.

Caleb stresses hands-on experience.

For senior Caleb Carver, a theatre major, that meant acting, directing, designing props and serving as an assistant lighting and stage designer for various productions.

“I’ve done it all,” he said, “which is what I wanted, because I felt that if I’m going to teach children about theatre, then I should know the basics of all of it.”

Jennifer Nostrala, professor of theatre arts, had the contacts to help Caleb obtain a summer internship at The Children’s Theatre Company in Minneapolis, the largest children’s theatre in the world.

“That internship taught me so much. I was able to work with children ages 3 to 12. I learned personal skills, like conflict management and how to communicate. I’m getting job interviews because that internship is on my résumé.”

Caleb said the best part about his Simpson experience “is the relationships I have created with other people. In our theatre, we talk about how we’re like a large family. I’m confident that will continue after college.”
SERVING OTHERS

Our students are known for accepting the responsibility to make the community and the world a better place.

Others have noticed. Newsweek magazine ranked Simpson among the nation’s top 25 schools for the most service-minded students, faculty and policies.

Each year since its inception, the President’s Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll has recognized Simpson for its commitment to community service.

“Service at Simpson is more than what we do. It’s who we’re called to be.”

- Jim Hayes, Associate Dean and Director of CVIL
CAMPUS DAY

A tradition that goes back to 1890. Everyone at Simpson—students, faculty and staff—take a day to volunteer for a project on campus and in the community.

“Simpson always looks so beautiful after Campus Day. It’s like the official beginning of spring.”

– Ben Rodgers

SUSTAINABILITY

Simpson cares about our environment. Students run an organic garden. We also offer free bicycles and have hydration stations to reduce water bottle consumption.

“Working in the organic garden on campus helped me realize my interests in farming and organic agriculture. I want to supply good food to people as well as preserve the environment. Simpson is committed to a sustainable future.”

– Terry Hodge

RELIGIOUS LIFE COMMUNITY (RLC)

This student-led group strives to meet the spiritual needs of every student.

“This is a community where anyone can come to grow in the never-ending journey of faith and spirituality.”

– Austin Roy, RLC president

WESLEY SERVICE SCHOLARS

Selected students are offered a $500 scholarship to perform 40 hours of volunteer service every semester.

“Being a Wesley Service Scholar allows you to try things you’ve never done before. I worked for Habitat for Humanity, was a Big Sister and a Girl Scout leader. I also started a charity to send clothes to orphans in Rwanda.”

– Kayla Hamilton

“People who graduate from Simpson get positions. They will find jobs. When they apply to grad schools, they will get in, because it’s Simpson, and that makes a difference.”

Dana Lain graduated in April 2012. She’s now a full-time aquarist at the National Aquarium in Washington, D.C., where she keeps sharks healthy and helps raise baby sea turtles.

“My love and drive to work with marine wildlife came from the experiences I had at Simpson,” she says.

Those experiences included a May Term trip her freshman year to Ecuador and the Galapagos Islands. Then she held an internship at Blank Park Zoo in Des Moines. That led to an internship at the National Aquarium, which led to her job.

Dana was encouraged at Simpson to declare an interdisciplinary major, which allowed her to choose courses in environmental science, biology and journalism.

“Simpson is a nurturing community. People only tell you yes. Simpson also prepared me to be a leader, to not be afraid to give my opinion and my ideas.”
